Background

A Dementia Friendly village ensures every part of the community plays a role in working together to ensure that people with dementia can live as independently as possible. Dementia Friendly communities increase capacity to support people with dementia along with their care partners.

Local governments determine many community features that influence the quality of life for people with dementia. At the local level, policymakers can act to:

- 1) Minimize adverse health outcomes and improve quality of life for people with dementia and reduce care partner stress.
- 2) Allow a person with dementia to remain at home longer, cutting costs tied to stays in health care facilities.
- 3) Create a community that is more livable for all residents, including older adults and people with disabilities.

- 4) Benefit local economies by fostering a more attractive, competitive, and sustainable community.

In order to obtain the designation, Dementia Friendly America recommends four steps:

- 1) Convene; determine community readiness, build an action team and engage the community more broadly.
- 2) Engage; the broader community in a dialogue to learn community strengths, gaps, and priorities for action which raises awareness of dementia
- 3) Analyze; review all the data available from interviews and assessments, determine community strengths and gaps/opportunities related to each of the key elements of a dementia friendly community, and identify priority goals.
- 4) Act; create a community action plan and a timeline that includes specific objectives, and activities to meet these objectives, along with designating a lead person/organization.

The Development Customer Services Department (Staff liaison to the Aging in Place) will work with the Aging in Place Commission to take the steps necessary to obtain the designation and will coordinate with other citizen commissions, such as Disability Access and other Village Departments such as Health, Police and Fire.
